TUCSON, Ariz. (KVOA) - Now leasing in South Tucson, Cabana Bridges, a 170,784 square-foot multifamily community, offers Tucson residents brand new studio, one-, and two-bedroom apartment homes for the budget-conscious.

Located at 1102 E 36th St, Cabana Bridges, managed by MEB Management Services, is now leasing its first building with move-ins set for the beginning of October and all units available for move-in by the end of November with starting prices at $1,099.

South Tucson has not seen the introduction of a newly built rental community in several years.

Cabana Bridges offers a newly constructed living opportunity for those seeking a thoughtfully designed community at an affordable price point.

“As Tucson continues to grow, we want to be mindful to offer living options that fit a range of budgets,” says Amity Dalton, Vice President of New Development at MEB Management Services. “Cabana Bridges may be a budget-conscious community, but sacrifices have been made when it comes to quality. Cabana Bridges provides all the comforts and conveniences of modern living in a desirable location.”

Residents will be able to enjoy Cabana Bridges’ thoughtfully designed amenities including a 24/7 fitness center, outdoor fitness circuit, yoga yard, boutique swimming pool, modern clubhouse, shared spaces, a community garden, and EV charging stations.

Cabana Bridges residents will enjoy being conveniently located near Interstate-10, where they can easily access the shopping and dining options they desire including Costco, Walmart, First watch and MOD Pizza.
